The Research Presented

Depression and its relationship to aggressive behavior in patients with borderline personality disorder

Psychological stress and depression among drug addicts and methods of prevention and treatment Abstract

This research discusses the presence of mental health and depression professionals among drug control directors and their contribution to the psychological and social factors contributing to addiction. Psychological factors are of great importance, and they also participate in research into drug control methods, such as developing moral values, religious awareness, and early detection of addicts.

Importance of the Research

The research provides recommendations on understanding the psychological and social factors of drug addiction and activating prevention methods.
